RESOURCES LIST

Introduction

The list of resources below is intended as a guide for teachers, though many are addressed directly to students. It is recommended that, in addition, candidates keep informed through a selection of relevant newspapers, journals and other sources.

This list is neither exhaustive nor prescriptive and it is not envisaged that all of the material listed will be used. The books included in the list are not intended as set texts. They have been selected as examples of the type of resources which may be useful in dealing with topics in the specification. Teachers are advised to consult current publishers' lists and to inspect any book before ordering a class set. The titles and publishers are correct at the time of going to press.

Resources that have been produced with the new specification in mind (first teaching in September 2008) have been emboldened. Other resources listed here were originally produced for the legacy specification and are included because they should still be relevant to the new specification.

Whilst every effort has been made to ensure that the resources are currently available, in some cases they may be out of print or difficult to obtain. In such instances, copies are usually available through inter-library lending services.

The 13 or 10-digit number in each reference is the International Standard Book Number (ISBN). Some packs of materials do not have ISBNs, but are available from the Publisher.

Most books in print are listed, with their current prices and often with readers' reviews, at popular book websites. Many other relevant titles can also be found at those sites.
